

Located on the waterside slopes of Seaforth, this 1980s four-level home was completely stripped back internally and transformed into a modern, contemporary retreat with panoramic views over Middle Harbour and the Spit Bridge. The house features a stunning curved stairwell which was used as a key reference. The stairs bronze aluminium battens were used as a sculptural element throughout the home, whilst also providing a screen. The end result is a warm and comfortable interior sanctuary.

Photographer: Peter Crumpton