

A single-level Californian Bungalow house has been completely transformed into a two-storey contemporary home. Internally, the period details of the former bungalow have been retained and extended in the front rooms and hall. Externally, horizontal cladding boards and extruded timber window frames were used creating clean lines and architectural interest.

PHOTOGRAPHER | SIMON WHITBREAD

