

Dalton Road House

Mosman | Renovation | 2002

This project involved major alterations and additions to a large Federation house. The additions comprise a separate flat and rumpus room on the lowest floor, a large informal living/ dining/ kitchen on the middle level and a parents retreat integrated into the roofscape. The features of the original house have been retained, the new contemporary styled additions carefully knitted into the fabric to create a seamless transition between old and new.

This project provides a fine example of the successful integration of a new modern addition with an existing heritage house.
