

Located on the western slopes overlooking Little Sirius Cove, this 1920's Californian bungalow was carefully refurbished and extended in a traditional architectural manner. The internal palette of limed oak floors, Calacutta marble benchtops, limestone tiles and clean white walls create a light, warm, 'Scandinavian' interior.

This project is a fine example of the successful integration of a modern addition to a traditional California bungalow.

Photographer: Katherine Lu