

Extensively renovated for multi-generational family living, this home was located in a heritage conservation zone and the extension could not be visible from the street. By introducing a 'shipping container' extension at the back, a two-storey level was created at the rear of the home which belies the look of the front facade, resulting in a modern living interior.

A central bonsai courtyard captures the northern sun and extensive ceiling heights & external shutters ensure this filtered light is featured year-round, throughout the house.

PHOTOGRAPHER | TOM FERGUSON

