

Sited on the highest level of a gently sloping block overlooking Pittwater, this new dwelling is composed of three interconnecting pavilions, supporting a single timber-clad pavilion on top. These simple rectilinear forms are separated to create an internal courtyard which facilitates cross-ventilation. The result is a sophisticated contemporary home that embraces its surroundings and maximises the northerly views.

Photographer: Craig Bryant