

Set on elevated land above Sydney Harbour, this adaptive reuse of a federation home offers refined, flexible living in a secluded yet central Manly location. Designed for everyday comfort and year-round entertaining, the layout adapts to the owner's needs while outdoor areas embrace existing trees for natural shade and privacy.

A focus on natural light and premium materials enhances the home's connection to its coastal surroundings. Key features include a hand-carved walnut door, sculptural staircase, and gallery-style walls for art display. Oversized windows frame sweeping harbour and city views, while timber battens and crisp white render deliver a durable, contemporary coastal finish.

PHOTOGRAPHER | TOM FERGUSON

