

Built over a natural watercourse on an environmentally sensitive site, this new residence required an original and inspiring design solution. Taking advantage of the views to the Middle Harbour and the natural bushland, the house features vast expanses of glass without compromising privacy.

Concrete floors, crisp white walls and face brick walls run inside out, creating a sanctuary connected to its environment.

PHOTOGRAPHER | CRAIG BRYANT

